Quadruplets increase proud father's family to even dozen. Quadruplets, just arrived, have increased the family of Mr. and Mrs. George L. Wittig of Baltimore to 12 children. Wittig is an employee of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone company. The four youngsters just born are all normal and strong. The one boy and three girls totaled 18 pounds 3 ounces.

Uncle Sam's newest battleship goes into commission. Uncle Sam's newest and most powerful battleship, the U. S. S. West Virginia, the last to be constructed under the disarmament plan, was placed in commission at Norfolk, Va. From Norfolk the great ship, which is electrically operated, went to the navy yard at Brooklyn to receive its finishing touches.

Sailor boxers prepare for fleet championships. Here's an unusual training stunt introduced by two navy boxers, L. Hummel of the U. S. S. Wyoming and R. Taglum of the U. S. S. Seattle. They hop upon one of the giant guns of the U. S. S. Wyoming and do their sparring there—it helps them to judge distance and to perfect balance.

The order of redheads. Staid Hunter college, where many of New York's teachers and others prominent in the city's field of usefulness are turned out, has a new fraternity. In order to belong to it the applicant must have red hair. No others need apply. Above are shown the charter members of the new organization, in happy mood.

Why Florida is popular in January. Surf bathing in midwinter at Miami Beach, Miami, Fla. It can't be done in Nebraska.
